Writing Prompt(s) for "Feuds" article
Journal/writing due for conferences

Answer one of the following prompts in one page.

1. Reflect on a time when you were a member of a group that had a task to complete (school, work, camp) but had difficulty completing the task because of interaction between group members. Before reading the article, write a paragraph about how you perceived your role in that group. Then read the article and return to this question.
2. Based on the five categories listed in the article, describe a role you have played (or might have a tendency to play) when working in a group.
3. After reading the article, create a new category and describe its traits.
4. Using the chart on page 98 of the article, describe any coping strategies you have/might use when dealing with conflict within a group. What would you add to/subtract from this list? Do you think these suggestions would work in a "real context?" Why or why not?
